

MONICA VAN BEUSEKOM, Ph.D.

Academic Advisor, Individualized and Interdisciplinary Studies Program

Dr. van Beusekom is a graduate of Tufts University (BA, history) and Johns Hopkins University (MA and Ph.D., African History). An academic advisor at UConn since 2006, her career includes work for international NGOs in West Africa and teaching African history at three US universities. Specializing in the history of colonial era development policies and practices in francophone West Africa, she is the author of several journal articles and Negotiating Development: African Farmers and Colonial Experts at the Office du Niger, 1900-1960 (Heinemann's Social History of Africa series, 2002).